Aviation-Event Security 2022 FRA

REVIEW 2022

29 August 2022, Radio Frankfurt

Testimonials

“It felt good to discuss actual trends of the industry and exchange experiences with other experts after such a long time without these events. And of course it really feels good to see our business recovering, despite all challenges we are facing at the moment.”

Andy Matthias Müller, Managing Director, Securitas Aviation Deutschland

“We need a strong aviation network to meet the many global challenges that affect us all, including at the national level. Safety is an essential prerequisite for the economic success of aviation. Safety is not an end in itself.”

Thorsten Schmidt-Look, Police Senior Chief Superintendent,
Head of Smart Borders Project Group (German Federal Police)

In the summer of 2022, the topic of security will once again be of particular importance - delays and flight cancellations at many European and American airports due to a lack of staff, but also because the demand for travel by plane is sometimes stronger than ever. Although the security area is only partially affected, it is part of the overall system, and nobody likes long queues in front of the security checkpoints. That's why Aviation-Event takes up the topic again.

Marcel Riwalsky, CEO, Aviation-Event
